Becoming an attraction

Offices at the new Harbor Place building are filling up.

At least one Pentucket Medical Associates doctor has found a new home at The Residences at Harbor Place. Joining him is a local longtime Haverhill philanthropic businessman.

One of the attractions of the Harbor Place building is the view of downtown and the Merrimack River.

Harbor Place, of course, is the development that replaced the old Woolworth building at the eastern end of downtown.

New life for aging school?

Talk among educational types is that Greenleaf School, one of those old brick neighborhood schools built more than a century ago, will get new life next year.

The building might become the city's Kindergarten Center next year.

Get your baseball fix close to home

The Lamplighter recently attended a Red Sox night game that lasted over four hours and ended the next day (past midnight) — and it was only nine innings, no extra frames.

No wonder Major League Baseball is having a tough time keeping fans interested. Looking for a shorter game that is entertaining? Head to Trinity Stadium for a Night Owl or Legion game. Those are generally over in two hours.

Changing places

An agency is about to move from an inner-city neighborhood — and settle right back in the same neighborhood.

Watch for a nonprofit group housed on Winter Street that is planning to move into its own building, also on Winter Street.

Lesson in local history

Greenleaf School second-graders have been reading the plaque in front of the school commemorating the location as the first site of Northern Essex Community College decades ago.
