HAVERHILL — The state's top leader and his right-hand woman are both visiting the city Wednesday to discuss Haverhill's economy and meet with business leaders.

Gov. Charlie Baker is touring the downtown, with a focus on the new Harbor Place development at the eastern entrance to the city center. Harbor Place, now under construction, will contain a UMass Lowell satellite campus, a variety of businesses, apartments and a boardwalk along the river.

Baker is expected to announce a grant to further boost the downtown. The state has invested millions of dollars in Harbor Place. State officials have called the project a model of how public and private money can work together.

Lt. Gov. Karyn Polito will also be in Haverhill Wednesday for the Merrimack Valley Chamber of Commerce dinner at DiBurro's function hall. She is the key speaker at the event, which will honor local businesses and individuals for their work in the community.

Full reports on the governor's visit and the chamber dinner will appear in Thursday's Eagle-Tribune.
