Here are 26 affordable housing projects that just got $90M in state money

Aug 16, 2016, 2:42pm EDT

Massachusetts Gov. Charlie Baker on Monday announced 26 housing projects across the commonwealth will receive a combined $90 million in state and federal tax credits and subsidy funds, funding that will go toward creating or preserving 1,420 rental units — of which 1,334 are designated affordable.

The state's Department of Housing and Community Development is awarding $31 million in state and federal low-income housing tax credits, which is expected to generate $218 million in equity for the 26 projects, Baker's office said. The state is also awarding $59 million in housing subsidy funds for the projects.

"These affordable housing awards reflect our administration's commitment to a stronger, more prosperous, and more inclusive commonwealth," Baker said in a statement. "By increasing affordable housing production, and stabilizing working families, low-income senior citizens and homeless families or those at risk, these housing awards will strengthen communities across Massachusetts."

In May, Baker committed to infusing $1.1 billion into the commonwealth's affordable and workforce housing development and preservation programs, which aimed to create or preserve 5,000 units of affordable housing by 2021.

The 26 projects will provide housing for individuals and families transitioning out of homelessness, disabled persons and the elderly. Here are the awarded projects:

Belchertown

Christopher Heights, an assisted living project to be developed by the Grantham Group. Located on the former Belchertown State School site, the project will feature 83 total rental units with services for frail seniors, including 43 affordable units, with 17 units reserved for seniors earning less than 30 percent of area median income.
