

Seeking housing for low-income families

The administration of Charlie Baker contributed millions to fight the crisis

By TELEMUNDO BOSTON

The administration of Charlie Baker contributed millions to combat the housing crisis in the state. (Published Tuesday August 16, 2016)

/ Div>

The administration of Charlie Baker contributed millions to combat the housing crisis in the state.

The family of Luis Alisea, who came from Puerto Rico seeking a better life but became homeless after being trapped by drug addiction, could this help.

- Zika clinic offers testing in Lawrence

Alisea work has been able to get at least 20 to 25 hours a week and hopes to continue working to pay for affordable housing in Boston in less than a year.

The director of the shelter St. Francis said the affordable housing program could change the lives of people who need it as Luis.

She feared for her life: Father kills wife, three children and dog

Facebook

State administration provided more than 200 million to advance more than 20 affordable housing projects and provide a home to more than 1,400 families.

In the next 18 months the units will be ready to receive people.

- David Ortiz decides the victory of the Red Sox with homer

Published Tuesday August 16, 2016

Telemundo Boston

Take us with you! Follow us on Facebook or Twitter and please click here to download the completely free application Telemundo Boston . Where you want. Anytime.

div id = "taboola-below-article-text-links" style = "clear: none">

Search Article en

<http://www.telemundoboston.com/noticias/local/Buscan-vivienda-para-familias-de-bajos-ingresos-390290742.html>